The Intimacy Quiz

Baby what's your flavour?

by Swaane Lauwaert

The Intimate Blueprint Quiz: What's your flavor?

Answer the 6 questions below. For each question, note down the letter that speaks to you the most. There are no wrong answers—just different ways to be 'hungry'.

1. What draws you in the most when you're in the kitchen?

A: A quiet, stilled space with soft lighting—an atmosphere where I can let the outside world fade away.
B: A counter full of fresh ingredients, vibrant colors, and scents that instantly bring me back into my body.
C: I need that immediate spark; I love the heat, the speed, and the raw passion of the moment.
D: A touch of mystery; perhaps a blindfold waiting on the table or a game where the rules are set in advance.

2. What is the most seductive act to you?

A: Pouring a glass together and looking deep into each other's eyes for 30 seconds without saying a word.
B: Slowly massaging oil over each other's hands and feeling the different textures.
C: The direct, uncomplicated enjoyment of a dish or drink that's so full of flavor it turns me 'on' instantly.
D: The feeling of surrender: being fed while not knowing what's coming next, or challenging the other person with a daring flavor.

3. How does your desire respond to distance?

A: I need space to feel the other person's energy again; too much closeness tends to smother my spark.
B: I prefer to bridge the gap through physical proximity: a touch, a scent, or just feeling them right next to me.
C: Distance makes me impatient; I want to feel the connection right here and now—physical and powerful.
D: Distance is an opportunity for a mental game; a look that promises exactly what's going to happen later.

4. What is your biggest 'Erotic Brake' (what kills the mood for you)?

A: Loud noises, bright lights, or a partner who enters my space too quickly and directly.
B: An environment that isn't aesthetic, unpleasant smells, or a partner who is physically at the table but mentally still stuck on their to-do list or deadlines.
C: Too much talking, over-analyzing, or when the action takes too long to get started.
D: Routine. If everything goes exactly like it did last time, I quickly lose interest.

5. How does your body respond to pleasure and that first 'Mouthgasm'?

A: I need time to land. The real spark only starts once the noise in my head fades away. I mostly enjoy the promise of what's to come.
B: I'm turned on by subtle triggers. I enjoy every single fiber of how something feels and tastes.
C: My body turns 'on' quickly; I thrive on the intensity of the release and the craving for more.
D: I'm awakened by surprise—like a grain of salt on sweet cream that jolts my brain awake. The tension of the unexpected puts my senses on high alert.

6. What are you looking for in the 'Afterglow' (the digestion)?

A: Silence and stillness; just being together in the energy we've built, without any words.
B: Physical tenderness; spooning and continuing to feel each other's skin.
C: A sense of physical fulfillment and the raw power of the passion we just shared.
D: Relishing the game; talking about what we dared to explore together.

The Reveal: Your Intimate Culinary Profile

Mostly A: The Energetic (The Atmosphere Gourmet)
Your desire lives in the space between you. You crave ambiance, intention, and anticipation. For you, the mise-en-place—the preparation and the setting—is the most important part of the evening.

Mostly B: The Sensual (The Sensory Chef)
You are the queen of the senses. Scent, taste, and touch are your gateways to pleasure. You revel in the flow of honey and the delicate texture of a meringue.

Mostly C: The Sexual (The Passionate Guest)
Your desire is a primal force. You love directness, heat, and intensity. In the kitchen, you want to taste, touch, and feel the physical connection as directly as possible.

Mostly D: The Kinky (The Adventurous Alchemist)
For you, erotica starts between the ears. You are sparked by power play, surprise, and surrender. The blinddoek—the blindfold—is your favorite tool in the kitchen.

A tie in points? The Shapeshifter.
You are a culinary chameleon who thrives on variety, capable of choosing a different blueprint every single night.